Musa Jackson

Musa Jackson, born and raised in Harlem. He is a true renaissance man known internationally as "The Harlem Ambassador". One of the pioneering Black male models discovered by the beauty editor of GQ magazine in 1983, he modeled for GQ, Spanish Vogue, French Vogue, Italian Vogue, Mademoiselle, Seventeen, Per Lui, New York Fashion of the Times magazines and walked the runways in Paris and Milan for Jean Paul Gaultier's debut collection. He would become Harlem's first ever international top Black male model becoming a part of the iconic male models of the 80s. And the first Black male model for The Gap in a nationwide mainstream campaign. He has starred in over 40 commercials including Pepsi wi
